Appendix

Below are samples of the database used in this study, containing the complete analysis of 250 tone units from each of the four texts. The samples are preceded by a description of the symbols in the individual columns of the database. The last part of the Appendix presents Tables 11a-14a (modified versions of Tables 11-14), which are the basis of Figures 9-12 in section 4.5.4.

1 Symbols used in the database

Column 1: Correlation number of the tone unit

All examples in this study are referred to by the correlation number. In Protest-Cz, this number is identical to the serial number (extended by two zeros). In Protest-En, the correlation number relates the English tone units to their Czech counterparts. In Dialogue-Cz and Dialogue-En, whose tone units do not correlate because their contents are not identical, the correlation number is a copy (in the case of Dialogue-Cz), or a modified form (in the case of Dialogue-En) of the serial number (column 2).

Correlation number in Protest-Cz and Protest-En:

The correlation number in Protest-Cz is a copy of the serial number (column 2), extended by two zeros, which have been added in order to achieve a graphical correspondence (a five digit number) with the correlation number of Protest-En. The correlation number in Protest-En refers to Protest-Cz in the following ways. The first three digits of the correlation number of the English tone unit are identical to the correlation (and serial) number of the Czech tone unit whose translation the English tone unit represents. If there is a one to one correspondence between the tone units, the three digits are followed in the English text by two zeros (e.g. 20600, 20700). If two (or more) Czech tone units are realized as one English unit, the first three digits and the fourth digit of the correlation number in the English text indicate the extent of the correlation. For example, the Czech tone units 21700 and 21800 were realized as one tone unit in English; the extent of the correlation is 21700–21800, therefore this tone unit has correlation number 21781. The last digit gives the order in which the tone unit occurs among all the tone units that correspond to 21700 and 21800; in this case this number is 1, because it is the first (but also the last) tone unit corresponding to 21700 and 2180.

If one Czech tone unit is realized as two English tone units, again the first three digits and the fourth digit of the English tone units indicate the extent of the correlation, and the fifth digit determines their order within the correlation. For example, the English tone units 20881 and 20882 correspond to the Czech tone unit 20800; the extent of the correlation of 20881 and 20882 is 20800 to 20800 (i.e. 20800 only), where 20881 is the first tone unit corresponding to 20800 and 20882 is the second tone unit corresponding to 20800.

In cases where there is no correspondence at all, either because a piece of utterance was left untranslated, or a piece of utterance was added into the English text without having an equivalent in the original text, the whole tone unit is excluded from the comparison; this is indicated by zeros in all columns including the correlation number column (cf. já vám něco \řeknu between tone units 212 and 213).

Correlation number in Dialogue-En and Dialogue-Cz:

In Dialogue-En the correlation number refers to the number of the line on which the tone unit occurs in the London-Lund Corpus (LLC). In Dialogue-Cz the correlation number (column 1) is a copy of the serial number (column 2). There is no direct correlation between Dialogue-En and Dialogue-Cz.

Column 2: Serial number of the tone unit

The serial number in column 2 indicates the order of the tone units as they occur in the text. The serial number is 000 for all tone units/lines that were excluded from the analysis, i.e. tone units in Protest-Cz and Protest-En that do not have a counterpart in the other text, and lines in Dialogue-En which only contain contextual comment (e.g. laugh) and/or non-nucleus-bearing murmur (e.g. m).

Column 3: Length of the tone unit in terms of words

Column 4: Position of the nucleus (in terms of words) from the end of the tone unit

Column 5: Interpretative position of the nucleus in Czech prepositional phrases

In Czech prepositional phrases containing a monosyllabic preposition, there is an obligatory placement of the stress on the preposition (e.g. 35700 /nad vodou; see above). Column 3 interprets the position of the nucleus in such cases as if the nucleus occurred on the head of the prepositional phrase. (The head is more dynamic than the preposition and the nucleus on the preposition in effect demonstrates the prominence of the entire prepositional phrase.) Non-prepositional phrases and all other elements in which a discrepancy between the actual position and the interpretative position cannot arise, are denoted with a full stop (.). Prepositional phrases in which the nucleus actually does occur on the head word are marked either as 'h' or as 'p'. The mark 'h' indicates prepositional phrases in which the nucleus duly occurs on the head because the preposition consists of a single consonant (the consonant is attached in pronunciation to the head and becomes part of its first syllable, e.g. 35600 k/těm) or because the preposition is multisyllabic (regular placement of accent on the head). The mark 'h' also indicates the placement of the nuclear accent on a head consisting of more than three syllables (optional placement of accent on the head). The mark 'p' indicates cases in which the nucleus should fall on the monosyllabic preposition but was actually placed on the head (deviating from the obligatory placement).

Column 6: Pitch direction of the nucleus

\	fall
/	rise
∨	fall-rise
∧	rise-fall
=	level

Columns 7 and 8: Word class functions of the nucleus bearer

The word class interpretation of nucleus bearing words presented in this column is a compilation of the approaches applied in Dušková 1988, Karlík et al. 1995, Havránek and Jedlička 1960, Quirk et al. 1985, the Collins Cobuild English Dictionary 1998 and The Concise Oxford Dictionary 1990 (eighth edition). The word class system developed on the basis of these sources enables the comparison of word classes in Czech and English despite the different approaches to word classes in the two languages. The system inevitably involves a simplification of many issues and the introduction of categories and subcategories which are not part of the traditional word class systems of the compared languages (e.g. quantifiers and wh-words in Czech). Interjections and particles were placed in one common category (I+P) because they share many features, although they are interpreted differently by different grammarians. In recent grammars of English, for instance, particles are not listed as a separate word-class category at all; instead, much interest is devoted to discourse markers (discourse particles), which, in this study, correspond to the category 'I+P, con' and part of the category 'I+P, exc' (see below). In this respect, this study observes the conventions of Czech traditional grammars rather than the most recent English grammatical categorization. Column 7 indicates the main word class categories; subcategories and some additional specifications of the nucleus bearers are given in column 8. Below is a list of the abbreviations used in the two columns.

N , ,	nouns
N ,att,	attributive nouns
N ,pos,	nouns in the possessive case
N ,pre,	only in Czech: phrases consisting of a preposition and a noun with the nucleus occurring on the preposition
Adj, ,	adjectives
Adj,att,	attributive adjective
Pro,per,	personal pronouns
Pro,pos,	possessive pronouns
Pro,dem,	demonstrative pronouns
Pro,oth,	other pronouns
Pro,qua,	pronouns used as quantifiers
Num, ,	cardinal and ordinal numerals
Num,qua,	only in Czech: indefinite numerals comparable to some of the English quantifiers
V ,lex,	lexical verbs
V ,nlex,	non-lexical verbs (auxiliary verbs, modal verbs, copulas)
V ,adv,	only in English: phrasal verbs with the nucleus occurring on the adverbial element
Adv,ptm,	adverbs of place, time and manner used as adjuncts
Adv,mea,	adverbs of measure used as adjuncts
Adv,sen,	sentence adverbs (including modal adverbs/particles) used as disjuncts or conjuncts
Adv,qua,	adverbs used as quantifiers
Wh-, ,	wh-words
Pre, ,	prepositions
Con, ,	conjunctions
I+P,exc,	interjectional exclamations
I+P,pol,	interjections and particles predominantly expressing polarity

I+P, con,	interjections and particles predominantly functioning as contact means (including means of expressing hesitation)
I+P, int,	particles serving as intensives [vytíkací částice]

Column 9: FSP function of the nucleus bearer within the basic distributional field

RhPr	Rheme proper
Rh	Rheme
Tr	Transition
TrPr	Transition proper
DTh	Diatheme

Column 10: FSP function of the nucleus bearer within the distributional subfield of -1 level

A distributional subfield of -1 level is, for example, the subordinate object clause what I'm going to /do in 21500 (Protest-En); column 10 indicates the FSP function of the nucleus bearer to /do within this subfield. The object clause as a whole functions as one unit (prosodically represented by the nucleus on to /do) in the basic distributional field and its FSP function within the basic distributional field is given in column 9.

Column 11: FSP function of the nucleus bearer within the distributional subfield of -2 or lower level Note to columns 9, 10 and 11:

The majority of the FSP functions denoted in columns 9, 10 and 11 are functions within a field containing a verbal predication. The functions indicated in columns 9, 10 and 11 are functions of the words that carry the nucleus or whole communicative units that the words are a part of. In example 21500 (Protest-Cz), for instance, the function of RhPr at the level of the basic distributional field (0 level) stands for the whole subordinate clause co chci /udělat. The nucleus represents the whole subordinate clause. This subordinate clause provides another field of verbal predication, the -1 level subfield. In this subfield, the element /udělat, this time alone, functions as the RhPr.

Functional relations inside nominal fields (see Svoboda 1987 and 1989) have not been analyzed and a nominal unit is dealt with as one unit of the verbal field. In 21781, for instance, the nominal unit \any of their\questions has the function of RhPr at the verbal field of 0 level and the relations inside the nominal subfield are not further specified. In special cases, the functions of the elements inside the nominal fields are indicated in the respective columns but this is only for a better illustration of the structure of a set of tone units. No conclusions have been drawn from these occasional interpretations of the nominal fields. Examples of such special cases are tone units 24300 and 24400 in Protest-Cz. The RhPr of the basic distributional field of the sentence is the noun phrase \naděje \na mravní \obrodu\národa. This noun phrase extends over two tone units and carries two nuclei. The first one occurs within the first tone unit, the second one within the second. The second nucleus has a representative function in regard to the other units within the field (for 'representative function', see Firbas 1992: 149–50, 169–70); it represents the whole nominal unit as the RhPr of the sentence. The nucleus on \naděje has no representative function within the verbal field. Its function within the nominal field was indicated to better explain the relationship between the separate tone units. Functions of elements inside nominal fields are denoted in small letters preceded by angle brackets (>rhp, >rh, >tr, >trp, >dth). The abbreviation >dtr (cf. 24300) denotes an element of the nominal field which Firbas (1992: 83–5, 94–6, 167–9) interprets as diatheme (d) and Svoboda (1987: 76–77) as nominal transition (tr). (The distinction between these two approaches is irrelevant for the present study.)

Column 12: Indication of the level of integration of the nucleus bearer within the basic distributional field to which it belongs

- .. well integrated element or independent element/clause
- [.] loose RhPr
- [[loose DTh
- [] loose TrPr

(On loose communicative units (external communicative units) see Svoboda 1989: 77, and Chamonikolasová 1987.)

Column 13: Type of tone unit

- t terminal tone unit, i.e. the final tone unit of a sentence
- n non-terminal tone unit, i.e. a tone unit which does not conclude the sentence
- d declarative sentence
- y yes/no question
- w wh-question
- x special case

Column 14: Indication of the completeness/coherence of the utterance

- . complete/coherent utterance
- incomplete/incoherent utterance

Column 15: Indication of the speaker

V = Vaněk

S = Staněk

A = speaker A (female academic)

B = speaker B (male academic)

X = both speakers (one speaker starts the tone unit and the other one finishes it)

Column 16: The text of the tone unit containing prosodic transcription
