VISIGOTHAE VERSUS OSTROGOTHAE

In this article, new interpretations of the ethnonyms Visigoths and Ostrogoths are proposed in a wider context of Germanic and Indo-European ethnonyms. The first component of the ethnonym Visigothae is etymologized on the basis of Old High German wisa “meadow, pasture”, to express the way of livelihood of its bearers, Goths-Pastoralists. On the other way, the first component of the ethnonym Austrogothi/Ostrogothae may be identified with Old High German ustrī & ustari “diligence, activity”. These etymologies allow us to determine in both the ethnonyms the pair representing the functional opposition: Goths-Pastoralists vs. Goths-Farmers, resembling another pair of Gothic ethnonyms, for this once environmental, Greutungi vs. Tervingi, originally “people from the stony or sandy country” vs. “people from forests”, respectively.

Keywords: Goths, ethnonym, etymology, complementary.

1.1. The ethnonym Visigothae is attested in the following main variants, SCHÖNFELD (1911: 267–68); REICHERT (1987: 784–86):

Wisigothi – A.D. 472: Priscus Panites apud Jordanes, Getica 115.1;
Visigothae ~ Wisigottae & Wisigotae – A.D. 525: Cassiodorus, Varia 78.3 & 79.30;

Vesegothae – A.D. 556: Jordanes, Getica 64.22 (Vessegothae ~ Vaesegothae); 78.7; 83.9 (Vesogothae); 91.20; 92.5 (Vaesegothae); 97.16 = 99.16 = 103.14 = 106.7, 8, 17, 19 = 107.3 etc. (Wisigothi), 99.5 = 107.21 (Vesigothi), etc.

Οὐιστύοτθοι – A.D. 560: Procopius, b.V. I, 2.2 (Οὐιστγότθοι); 7 (Οὐισίτθοι); 37; 3.26; b.G. I, 12.12, 20, 21, 22, 33, 35, 43, 46, 48, 49, 50, 52; 13.4; 5; 11; 12; II, 30.15 = IV, 5.10 (Οὐιστγότθοι); IV, 5.5; Οὐισστγότθοι - A.D. 568: Cyrillus of Scytopolis 72, 176.4.

1.2. The ethnonym Ostrogothae is known in the following main variants, SCHÖNFELD (1911: 38–39); REICHERT (1987: 106):

Austrogoti & Austorgoti – A.D. 398 C.E.: Scriptores Historiae Augustae v. Claudiu 25, 6.2;
Obstrogoti – A.D. 402: Claudius Claudianus, Carmina Minora 20,153;
Ostrogothi – A.D. 481: Gai Solii Apollinaris Sidonii Epistulae et Carmina 137, 36;
Ostrogotus & Histrogotus – A.D. 518: Titulorum Gallicanorum Liber;
(H)ostrogothae, -i – A.D. 556: Jordanes, Getica 59,12; 64,22; 78,7; 83,9;
91,20 (Hostrogothae & Hostrogothi); 92,3 & 17; 103,13 (Hostrogothae);
109,18 (Hostrogothae) & 23 (Hostrogothi); 111,22 (Ostrogothi); 121,2,11,14;
122,14 & 17 (Hostrogothae & Ostrogothi); 127,12 (Ostrogothi).
Ostrogoti – A.D. 568: Chronica Caesaraugustana II, p. 222, 490.

2. Traditionally the ethnonym Austrogoti/Ostrogothae has been interpreted as “Eastern Goths”. It was already Jordanes [Getica, §82] who first formulated the following opinion: Ablabius enim historicus refert quia ibi super limbum Ponti, ubi eos diximus in Scythia commanere, <erat> pars eorum quae orientalem plāgam tenebat, eisque praeerat Ostrogotha. Incertum utrum ab ipsius nomine an a loco (id est orientali), dicti sunt Ostrogothae, residui vero Wisigothae (id est a parte occidua). “Now Ablabius the historian reports that in Scythia, where we have said that they were dwelling above an arm of the Pontic Sea, was a part of them that held the eastern portion, and their leader was Austra-guta; they were called Ostrogoths, it being uncertain whether from his name or from the place (that is, “eastern”). But the rest were called Visigoths (that is, the Goths of the western country).”¹ The term is well-attested in all Germanic languages with the exception of Gothic: austaz* > Old English eást “East”, late Middle High Germanic ost id., with derivatives austraz,-an* > Old Nordic austr “East”, Old English eáster, eástre “Easter”, Old High German pl. ōstara id., adv. austaně* > Old Nordic austan “from the East”, Old English eástan id., Old Saxon ōstana id., Old High German ōstana “eastward”, adj. austrōnjaz* > Old Nordic austrænn* “eastern”, Old English eástern, Old Saxon ōstrōni id., Old High German sund-ōstrōni “south-eastern”, OREL (2003: 30–31). This idea would be intelligible and therefore acceptable if both ethnonyms formed a meaningful pair, Eastern Goths vs. Western Goths, i.e. if the name of Visigoths was really derived from the cardinal point “west”. But it is not the case. The term “west” is always attested with -t-: westan* n. “west” > Old English adv. west “westwards; West”, Old Frisian west

“west”, Middle Low German west id., Old High German adv. nord-west “in the north-west”, including the derivatives like the adv. westanē* > Old Nordic vestan “from the west”, Old English westan id., Old Saxon westan(a) id., Old High German n. westan “West”, or the adj. westraz* > Old Nordic adv. vestr “westwards”, Old Saxon westar id., Old Frisian wester id., Old High German westar “western”, and westrōnjaz* > Old Nordic vestrænn, Old English westerne, Old Saxon westrōni, Old High German westrōni “western”, OREL (2003: 459). The etymology of the word “west” proves that the -t- component is an indispensable part of the word: the Germanic designation of “west” is derived from the IE verb H₂wes-* “to spend the night” (LIV 293) by the participle suffix -to-*, cf. Sanskrit vástu- “spending the night” with the -tu-suffix. The alternative etymology based on the compound of the prefix (a)we- “beyond” and the verb sed-* “to sit” (LIV 513–15), i.e. “sitting beyond [the horizon]”, also operates with Germanic t* < IE d*. If Visigothae are not “Western Goths”, why should then Ostrogothae be “Eastern Goths”? The direct comparison of the first component of the ethnonym Austrogoti / Ostrogothae with Sanskrit usrá- “shining, bright, morning” (the etymological counterpart of the Germanic aust(r)a-* “east”) preferred by Schönfeld (1911, 39) and Streitberg is not better since this solution opens another question: what is the meaning of the first component of the ethnonym Visigothae if it shall form a semantic counterpart to “shining, bright, morning”? SCHÖNFELD (1911: 267–268) and STREITBERG (1920: 7) seek the explanation in the component Wisi- of some archaic Germanic personal names: e.g. Ostrogoth Wisibodus, Vandal Visimar, the independent ethnonym Visi (300 C.E.), Vesi (5th cent.), perhaps identical with Visigothae, further personal names from the Old High German milieu Wisi-/Wisu- (e.g. U(u)isibado by Cassiodorus (Variae), or Visigard, the daughter of Theudeberts I., the king of the Langobards, by Gregory of Tours – see REICHERT (1987: 783–84). In some Indo-European branches the corresponding form is also productive in anthroponyms, e.g. the first component of the Old Indic personal names vásu-, or Gaulish vesu-/visu- (e.g. Vesu-avus), mostly meaning “good, excellent, noble” cf. MATASOVIĆ (2009: 418). But the pair “Bright-Goths” vs. “Good-Goths” looks rather strange.

3. The designations of other Gothic groups could be inspiring, namely Greutungi vs. Tervingi, where the same suffixal extension indicates they should be understood together. The ethnonym Greutungi / Grutungi / Grauthungi / Gruthungi etc., see SCHÖNFELD (1911: 113); REICHERT (1987: 389) is etymologizable on the basis of Old Nordic grjót “stone, gravel”, Old English gréot “sand, dust”, Old Frisian grēt “sand, gravel”, Middle Dutch griet id., Old Saxon griot id., Old High German grioz id., DE VRIES (1962: 190); OREL (2003: 141), therefore “people from the stony or sandy country”, SCHÖNFELD (1911: 113); similarly already Zeuss and Streitberg). In the ethnonym Tervingi / Thervingi / Terungi the derivative of the Indo-European word deru-* “tree” is identified. In Germanic for the appellative “tree” with secondary apophonic change of the suffix in the originally acrostatic neuter from dór-u* vs. obliquus dér-u^o* → dréu-, the “second Benveniste’s base” dreu- > Germanic trewan* > Gothic triu, Old Nordic tré, Old English tréo(w), Old Saxon treo, trio “tree” (OREL 2003: 409–10) is known. But the “first base” is also attested in Germanic, besides terwōn* ~ terwan* “tar” e.g. in the latinized Old Germanic matrae’s name Ala-terviae (Edinburgher Hafen Cramond). It is generally accepted the Tervingi were “people from forests”², perhaps a reminiscence of their stay in thickly wooded Dacia (SCHÖNFELD 1911: 222). The ethnonyms Greutungi and Tervingi form a pair in complementary unity, the former living in the barren country, while the latter were inhabitants of the forested land. The correct etymologies of the ethnonyms Ostrogothae & Visigothae should respect a similar principle.

4. A satisfactory solution could be based on the etymological connection of the component astra-* with Old High German ustrī & *ustarī*³, glossed by Latin *industria*⁴, i.e. “Fleiss, Regsamkeit” in German or “activity, dili-

2 Cf. Old Russian Derevljane vs. Poljane “forest-people” vs. “field-people” (B. Brogyányi, p.c.).

3 Swedish yster “frisky, lively, boisterous” added by Torp & Falk (1909, 33: ustrijaz*; followed by Orel 2003, 436) is probably not related if it is simplified from yrster* with regard to the dialect variant yrsker (Hellquist II, 1410–11).

4 Latin industria was among others also used when talking about agricultural activities, cf. e.g. Cornelius NEP. Cato 3.1: In omnibus rebus singulari fuit industria: nam et agricola sollers et peritus iuris consultus et magnus imperator et probabilis orator et cupidissimus litterarum fuit. “In all his pursuits he gave proofs of singular intelligence and industry; for he was a skilful agriculturist, well-informed in political affairs, experienced in the law, an eminent, commander, a respectable orator. He was also much devoted to literature.”

SERV. Aen. 1.273: et bene rusticorum laudat industriam “and pleasantly he praises the diligence of peasants”. (See Maurus Servius Honoratus, In Vergili carmina comentarii. Servii Grammatici qui feruntur, Georgius Thilo et Hermannus Hagen. Leipzig: Teubner. 1881).

gence” in English, usually derived from the verb ustinô̄n, glossed by Latin fungi, i.e. “verrichten, ausführen”/“accomplish”, see KÖBLER (1992: 1125); SCHADE (II: 1067); GRAFF (1834: 486), and of the component wisi-* (or waisi-*) with Old High German A.D. 810 wisa “meadow, pasture”, SPLETT (1993: 1140): “Wiese, Weide”; gl. Latin caespes, calma, pratum – see KÖBLER (1992: 1213), i.e. “grassy ground, grass, turf, lawn, meadow”), in the place names earlier: A.D. 756 Harioldes-wis, A.D. 795 Loubwisa (DW 14, I.2, 1575), German Wiese (also in the sense “pasture” – see DW 14, I.2, 1579–80), Middle Dutch & Middle Low German wese “meadow”, reflecting West Germanic wisō̄n*, besides the apophonic variant waisō̄n* continuing in Old Nordic veisa “pool, stagnant pond”, Old English wáse “ooze, mud, slime”, Old Frisian wāse id. TORP & FALK (1909: 413); OREL (2003: 441). In this perspective, it is possible to interpret the ethnonyms Austrogoti/Ostrogothae as ‘(field-)working-Goths’, i.e. ‘Goths-farmers’, vs. Visigothae as ‘Goths from pastures’, i.e. ‘Goths-pastoralists’. The first solution finds an unexpected internal Gothic support in the clan-name Amali (the Ostrogothic leaders should originate from this clan). The name is etymologizable on the basis of verbs attested in Icelandic amla “to exert, try hard, strive” (IDO 34), Norwegian amla “to work; drudge, toil; work hard” (NO I: c. 69), all derived from the Old Nordic verb ama “belästigen” (de Vries 1962: 8), see GRIMM (1880: 313): “In Amala liegt der begrif von amal, altn. aml labor, strenuitas und die Amalae sind wiederum die tapfern geschäftigen mühevollen helden”. And for the geographic and ethnologic context it is worthwhile to mention the differentiation of the Scyths according to HERODOT [IV, 11, 17, 18]: Σκύθαι οι νομάδες “Scythians – nomades”, Σκύθαι ἀροτῆρες “Scythians – ploughmen” and Σκύθαι γεοργοί “Scythians – farmers”:

[IV, 11] Σκύθας τοὺς νομάδας οἰκέοντας ἐν τῇ Ασίῃ, πολέμῳ πιεσθέντας ὑπὸ Μασσαγετέων, οἴχεσθαι διαβάντας ποταμὸν Ἀράξην ἐπὶ γῆν τὴν Κιμμερίην (τὴν γὰρ νῦν νέμονται Σκύθαι, αὕτη λέγεται τὸ παλαιὸν εἶναι Κιμμερίων) “There is yet another story, to which account I myself especially incline. It is to this effect. The nomadic Scythians inhabiting Asia, when hard pressed in war by the Massagetae, fled across the Araxes river to the Cimmerian country (for the country which the Scythians now inhabit is said to have belonged to the Cimmerians before)...”

[IV, 17] ἀπὸ τοῦ Βορυσθενειτέων ἐμπορίου..., ἀπὸ τούτου πρῶτοι Καλλιππίδαι νέμονται ἔοντες Ἑλληνές Σκύθαι, ὑπερ δὲ τούτων ἄλλο ἔθνος οἱ Ἀλαζόνες καλέονται. οὗτοι δὲ καὶ οἱ Καλλιππίδαι τὰ μὲν ἄλλα κατὰ ταῦτα Σκύθησι ἐπασκέουσι, σῖτον δὲ καὶ σπείρουσι καὶ σιτέονται, καὶ κρόμμια καὶ σκόροδα καὶ φακούς καὶ κέγχρους. ὑπερ δὲ Ἀλαζόνων οἰκέουσι Σκύθαι ἀροτῆρες, οἱ οὐκ ἐπὶ σιτήσι σπείρουσι τὸν σῖτον ἀλλ᾽ ἐπὶ πρήσι. τούτων δὲ κατύπερθε οἰκέουσι Νευροί. Νευρῶν δὲ τὸ πρὸς βορέην ἄνεμον ἔρημον ἀνθρώπων, ὅσον ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν. “North of the port of the Borystheneites, which lies midway along the coast of Scythia, the first inhabitants are the Callippidae, who are Scythian Greeks; and beyond them another tribe called Alazones; these and the Callippidae, though in other ways they live like the Scythians, plant and eat grain, onions, garlic, lentils, and millet. Above the Alazones live Scythian ploughmen, who plant grain not to eat but to sell; north of these, the Neuri; north of the Neuri, the land is uninhabited so far as we know.”

[IV, 18] ταῦτα μὲν παρὰ τὸν Ὑπανιν ποταμὸν ἔστι ἔθνεα πρὸς ἐσπέρης τοῦ Βορυσθένεος: ἀτὰρ διαβάντι τὸν Βορυσθένεα ἀπὸ θαλάσσης πρῶτον μὲν ἡ Ὑλαιή, ἀπὸ δὲ ταύτης ἄνω ιόντι οἰκέουσι Σκύθαι γεωργοί, τοὺς Ἐλληνές οι οἰκέοντες ἐπὶ τῷ Ὑπάνι ποταμῷ καλέουσι Βορυσθενεῖτας, σφέας δὲ αὐτοὺς Ὄλβιοπολίτας. οὗτοι Ὡν οἱ γεωργοί Σκύθαι νέμονται τὸ μὲν πρὸς τὴν ἥδη ἐπὶ τρεῖς ἡμέρας ὁδοῦ, κατήκοντες ἐπὶ ποταμὸν τῷ οὖνομα κεῖται Παντικάπης, τὸ δὲ πρὸς βορέην ἄνεμον πλόον ἀνὰ τὸν Βορυσθένεα ἡμερέων ἔνδεκα. ἥδη δὲ κατύπερθε τούτων ἡ ἔρημος ἔστι ἐπὶ πολλὸν. μετὰ δὲ τὴν ἔρημον Ἀνδροφάγοι οἰκέουσι, ἔθνος ἐδὼν ἴδιον καὶ οὐδαμῶς Σκυθικόν. τὸ δὲ τούτων κατύπερθε ἔρημον ἥδη ἀληθέως καὶ ἔθνος ἀνθρώπων οὐδέν, ὅσον ἡμεῖς ἴδμεν.

“These are the tribes by the Hypanis river, west of the Borysthenes. But on the other side of the Borysthenes, the tribe nearest to the sea is the tribe of the Woodlands; and north of these live Scythian farmers, whom the Greek colonists on the Hypanis river (who call themselves Olbiopolitae) call Borystheneītae. These farming Scythians inhabit a land stretching east a three days' journey to a river called Panticapes, and north as far as an eleven days' voyage up the Borysthenes; and north of these the land is desolate for a long way; after the desolation is the country of the Man-eaters, who are a nation apart and by no means Scythian; and beyond them is true desolation, where no nation of men lives, as far as we know.”⁵

To conclude, the present arguments document that in the names Austrogoti/ Ostrogothae and Visigothae the difference in the ways of the livelihood of two groups of Goths is reflected.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The present study was prepared thanks to the grant of the The Czech Science Foundation (GAČR), P406/12/0655. I would like to express my gratitude to Zuzana Malášková for correcting the English expression of the text and to two anonymous referees for their valuable comments. A non-anonymous specialist commenting the first draft of the text was Prof. Robert Nedoma (Vienna). He mentions the difference of connecting vowels in compounds Wisigothi & Austrogoti vs. stem-vowels of the hypothetical first components wisa & ustrī. But these words are Old High German, not Gothic. On the other hand, in the forms Vesogothi & Οὐστρίγοθος (Schönfeld 1911: 267–68, 248) the connecting vowels agree.

RESUMÉ

Austrogothi/Ostrogothae & Wisigothae/Vesegothae aj. tradičně bývají vnímáni jako ‘Východní & Západní Gótové’, jak soudil už Jordanes [Getica, §82] v polovině 6. st. Tato interpretace je nesporně mylná, neboť složka Wisi- apod. nemůže být utvořena od germánského westan* „západ“, westraz* „západní“. Přesvědčivější není ani alternativní etymologie obou etonym od Streitberga a Schönfelda, která by vedla k poněkud kurióznímu páru „Světlogóti“ & „Dobrogóti“. Inspirací mohou být jména jiných gótských skupin: Greutungi / Grutungi / Grauthungi / Gruthungi aj., vzhledem k staroseverskému grjót, staroanglickému gréot, starosaskému griot, starohornoněmeckému grioz „kamení, písek, štěrk“, zřejmě „lidé z kamenité či písečné krajiny“, a Tervingi / Thervingi / Terungi aj., vzhledem ke stgerm. „věstromovému“ božstvu v lat. přepisu (nom. pl.) Ala-terviae, a germ. trewan*, které pokračuje v gótském triu, staroseverském tré, staroanglickém tréo(w), starosaském treo, trio „strom“, pravděpodobně tedy „lidé z lesů“, představují opozici dvou výrazně rozdílných životních prostředí. Klíčem k primárním funkcím etonym Austrogothae & Wisigothae/Vesegothae mohou být starohornoněmecká slova ustrī ‘industria’, tj. „pracovitost, přičinlivost“, a wisa „pastvina“. Pak by obě etymologizovaná etonyma tvorila smysluplný pár reprezentující rozdíl v obžívě: Visigothae = ‘Gótové-pastevci’ & Austrogothi = ‘Gótové pracující [na polí]’, připomínající Hérodotovo [IV, 11, 17, 18] rozlišení Skythů kočovných [Σκύθαι οι νομάδες] a Skythů oráčů [Σκύθαι ὄροτῆρες] či Skythů rolníků [Σκόθαι γεωργοί]. Pozoruhodné potvrzení etymologie jména Ostrogótů nabízí i jméno klanu Amalů, z něhož se rekrutovali ostrogótští vůdcové. Již Jacob Grimm jej spojoval s islandským amla „snažit se, dřít se, lopotit se“, norským amla „těžce pracovat“.
