

Doležalová, Lucie

The Passion of the Robbers of Šlapanice according to Bartoš, the Executioner of Brno: between history and parody

Graeco-Latina Brunensia. 2021, vol. 26, iss. 1, pp. 37-51

ISSN 1803-7402 (print); ISSN 2336-4424 (online)

Stable URL (DOI): <https://doi.org/10.5817/GLB2021-1-3>

Stable URL (handle): <https://hdl.handle.net/11222.digilib/143910>

License: CC BY-SA 4.0 International

Access Date: 16. 02. 2024

Version: 20220831

Terms of use: Digital Library of the Faculty of Arts, Masaryk University provides access to digitized documents strictly for personal use, unless otherwise specified.

The Passion of the Robbers of Šlapanice according to Bartoš, the Executioner of Brno: Between history and parody

Lucie Doležalová
(Charles University, Prague)

Abstract

This study presents a new edition of an intriguing opuscule entitled Passio raptorum de Šlapanicz, secundum Bartoss, tortorem Brunnensem (The Passion of the Robbers of Šlapanice According to Bartoš, the Executioner of Brno), which describes the violent repression of a group of robbers tormenting the village of Šlapanice at Easter 1401 by burghers from Brno. The story is presented with the ample use of phrases from and allusions to the Gospels, creating a comic effect. Together with several other texts, it belongs among the so-called "mock-Passion narratives". It survives in a single manuscript (Prague, National Library, III E 27, ff. 61r–63r) from the end of the 15th century. The event described is not documented in any other source and the text displays several surprising features, such as a long list of (at least partly imaginary) villains, several exhortatory speeches, and a twisted validation formula. It thus remains rather enigmatic.

Keywords

medieval Latin; medieval Bible; medieval historiography; medieval parody; mock-Passion narrative; late medieval Moravia; late medieval manuscripts; late medieval Latin literature

The research leading to this study was supported by the European Regional Development Fund project KREAS, reg. no. CZ.02.1.01/0.0/0.0/16_019/0000734, as well as the Charles University project Progres Q07, "Centre for the Study of the Middle Ages." I am very grateful to Kateřina Voleková for all her help with the Old Czech transcription and interpretation, Jeff Rider for correcting my English, and the anonymous reviewers for their useful remarks. This study is for my teacher Stanislav Zajíček, a proud inhabitant of Šlapanice.

There are many texts from the Middle Ages that have survived in a single manuscript witness whose style and contents are so specific that it is a challenge to contextualize and interpret them. This contribution presents a new edition of one such curious text, Passio raptorum de Šlapanicz secundum Barthoss, tortorem Brunensem (Passion of the robbers of Šlapanice according to Bartoš, the executioner of Brno). Although this enigmatic opusculum provokes more questions than answers, it deserves scholarly attention.

At first glance, the Passio seems to be a piece of historiography, a narrative of a violent event that took place during Easter 1401, although it includes a number of surprising elements. The Passio relates that a group of robbers led by a Polish villain Kyczol arrive in Šlapanice (then a village, today a city near Brno in Moravia), settle in the local walled church, and tyrannize their neighbors, including clerics. They steal from everyone and torture all they capture, and many people run away. The burghers of Brno get together to decide what to do. Divák (i.e., Spectator or Onlooker) of Podskalí says the robbers should all be killed, and Pešek the prefect supports the idea. The nobleman Erhard of Kunštát, sent by Jošt, marquess of Moravia, arrives in Brno and asks the burghers to go ahead and kill the robbers, and so they gather an armed multitude and set off. The robbers see them coming to Šlapanice and one of them, Vlach, gives a speech to encourage the robbers, saying they should fight to win fame. Yet, Caspar the scribe responds that he is there not to fight but to record the events. The robbers get to the walls and see they are already surrounded. They address the assaulters in a friendly manner, but the burghers of Brno, rather than responding, attack them. Some robbers escape, some die in the fire set by the flaming arrows of the attackers, but most are captured. The burghers of Brno are happy and plan to raid the nearby town of Měnín, too, but they discover a barrel of wine, drink from it, and return to their homes. There follows a note about the great fame of the heroes and the infamy of the robbers and that seems to be the end. Yet, a new paragraph follows that relates that fifty-six robbers were captured and brought to Brno and describes the night before their execution. The burghers of Brno keep mocking the robbers, who promise to return all the stolen goods in a hundred years. The Brno citizens mockingly enumerate all the other robbers who are unable to come to the aid of the captives. The following day, the burghers decide to destroy the remains of the Šlapanice church, so that no other robbers can hide there.

The event is not recorded in any other source but František Hoffmann (1994 and 1996), the only person who has actually analysed the text, identified several of the characters with documented people¹ and argued persuasively that the whole fits well into the context of robber practices of the time. It is also in line with other occasions of church burning in the Middle Ages,² as well as that of the desecration of holy places. Radosław Kotecki (2012) notes the formulaic character of these desecration narratives and discusses their link to canon law, and the vocabulary of the Passio raptorum clearly fits into this context.

¹ Hoffmann (1996: pp. 155–163); only those identifications that Hoffmann proposes with certainty are included in the edition apparatus.

² For other medieval sources on burning of churches, which, however, do not form parallel in the narrative strategy to the Passio, see Raynaud (2007) or Strickland (1996).

At the same time, the Passio includes several features that are more at home in parody and satire than in historiography, such as the wine drinking by the burghers of Brno or the pompous speeches on both sides that are out of keeping with such a petty event. The proportion of direct speech is indeed striking, and the text abounds in exhortatory and battle rhetoric to such a degree that Hoffmann considered it “almost humanistic” (1996: p. 154). Yet, no direct classical or humanistic models have been identified.

The text has another unusual and startling feature: it contains many quotations from the Bible and allusions to it; some of these citations are faithful while others are transformed and twisted. The Bible indeed permeates all medieval writing, but here it invades the plot and adds fictional elements to it – e.g., darkness comes over the earth and there is an earthquake when the robbers are captured. Most of the references are to the Passion story and the defeat of the robbers is thus explicitly likened to the sacrifice of Jesus. The parallel is striking – bloodthirsty robbers are likened to innocent figures of Christ, their attempts to save themselves as his patient resignation, and the rightfully angry burghers of Brno as the evil Jews.

The strategy of narrating a historical event through the biblical narrative of the Passion is, however, not unique to this text. There is in fact a group of nine such texts, mock-Passion narratives, surviving curiously only from England, where they seem to have been in fashion at the turn of the fourteenth century, and from Bohemia where the fashion arrived a hundred years later.³ The limitation of these texts as historical sources is clear: quotations from the Bible might have been used on the one hand because they described the given events well, or, on the other hand, because the author wanted to liken the events to those of the Bible; thus, what they tell us about the events cannot be simply trusted.

These texts lie between historiography and parody, and have received only limited attention in either context,⁴ except for the Passio Iudeorum Pragensium (The Passion of the Jews of Prague), which was analysed in detail, among others, by Eva Steinová (2010 and 2012) and Barbara Newman (2012). In the Passio Iudeorum, the same technique is used to describe the Prague pogrom of Easter 1389, an actual event documented in a number of sources. All the other mock-Passion narratives relate documented events as well. Thus, it is reasonable to suppose that the Passion of the robbers is based on a historical event, too.

The closest textual parallels within the group are actually between the Passio raptorum and the Passio Iudeorum (in its most detailed and intertextual version, secundum Ieškonem).⁵ Yet, the Passio raptorum contains many Biblical verses that are not used in 3 Cf. Lehmann (1963: pp. 121–126, esp. 125); Doležalová (2014 and in print).

4 For examples of negative scholarly evaluation of these texts see Doležalová (in print).

5 Edited by Steinová (2010: pp. 18–23).

6 The closest parallel is when the attackers decide to act. In Passio Iudeorum, the passage reads: Dixit autem Ieško quadratus: "Rei sunt mortis. Et si in exterminio eorum oporteret me mori ob vindictam Iesu, non denegabo." In Passio raptorum it is: Pessko yppatus dixit: "Rei sunt mortis! Ego enim, et si oportuerit me mori cum illis, ad perendum eos armis instructus et cuspide letus properabo [cf. Mr 26:66].” Further, the besieged call their attackers amici and wonder why they have come in both versions [cf. Mt 22:12]. Both versions also include an allusion to rebuilding the church [cf. Mt 27:39–40, Mc 15:29] and to making a new mistake worse than the earlier one [cf. Mt 27:64].

any other known mock-Passion, as well as many that are included in several other texts of this type. In fact, none of the mock-Passions seems to have influenced any of the others directly. These texts shared an intertextual method, but do not seem to borrow directly from one another.⁷

These texts often address their own credibility in a metatextual manner. In the Passio raptorum, just before the end, there is a biblical reference to John 19:36–37 reflecting the narrative itself: Hoc autem totum factum est ut impleretur Scriptura dicens: "videbunt in quem transfixerunt." (All this happened so that the scripture is fulfilled: “They shall look on him whom they pierced.”) In the Bible, the point is that the Passion had to take place so that people would see the crucified Christ with their own eyes and understand he was the true Messiah. In the Passio raptorum, however, this biblical citation is followed by the sentence:

Hic autem, qui scripsit premissa non vidit, sed manens in Brunna audivit ex fama sicque et ex auditis testimonium perhibuit, ut et vos, si vultis, credatis.

“But the one who wrote the above did not see it but remaining in Brno he heard about it through rumors, and on the basis of what he heard he gave testimony, so that you, too, if you wish, may believe.”

This is a reference to John 19:35 turned upside down: it emphasizes that what is called a “testimony” is actually based on hearsay and the readers are asked to believe it if they decide to do so. Thus, on a whole, this is a reversal of the usual authentication topos, in which an author’s compiling evidence and referring to eye-witness testimony argue for the trustworthiness of their account. The Gospel message, however, cannot be proven in the usual ways and Christians are asked to believe through their faith. Those who require proof are similar to doubting Thomas who was ridiculed for believing only after he had put his fingers into Christ’s wound. Thus, in the Passio raptorum, reversing the authentication topos common to historiography creates another parallel to the Gospel narrative – extraordinary and impossible to prove, yet worthy of belief.

Finally, the list of other robbers is curious. František Hoffmann attempted to interpret it as referring to actual known robbers of the time. In some cases, his suggestions seem likely but in many others they are rather stretched. The list reveals its literary character, especially by including many names in rhymed couples: e.g., Duben – Buben, Kvampl – Lampl, Bochovec – Rochovec, or Sapák – Kapák.

Since the manuscript in which we find the Passio raptorum was copied decades after the events the account purports to describe, the text might have originated as a mock re-writing of a piece of history, as an exercise, an attempt to amuse friends, or as a result of another momentary impulse, unconnected to the events it describes. Through its use of the literary strategy of a “mock-Passion,” this opuscule can be included in the group of texts from late medieval Bohemia and fourteenth century England mentioned above, but this group had little success and influence on later literature. The mock-Passion might have been a passing fashion, or a literary dead-end. Later, it evoked both disapproval and disgust. In any case, these texts may be approached as belonging to a larger and exciting group of texts dependent on the Bible, written at a time when shared textual knowledge was the norm and playing with it was thus an option.⁸

⁷ For concrete examples, see Doležalová (in print).

Edition

This mock-Passion survives in a sole manuscript, Praha, Národní knihovna České republiky, III E 27, fols. 61r–63r.⁹ It is a composite codex from late 15th and early 16th century including a variety of texts, none other of historiographic nature. The same scribe copied the parodic Sermo de sancto Nemine (“Sermon on Saint Nobody”)¹⁰ that follows (fols. 63r–64r), and the bifolio containing the two texts might have been transmitted originally independently (fol. 64v is blank, except for the note Arnessto detur – “to be given to Ernest”). It was also probably written somewhat earlier than the rest of the current codex, perhaps in 1460s or 1470s.

The copy is not careful – there are many mistakes, dubious readings and in several points the meaning remains obscure. The present edition corrects the edition by František Šujan (1885), which included several misreadings and only very few identifications of biblical allusions. Some of Šujan’s mistakes were later corrected by František Hoffmann (1996: 152–153), who, however, did not edit the whole text and made some new mistakes. The text was also published in a Czech translation in Havránek & Hrabák & Daňhelka (1963), which amended some but not all of Šujan’s mistakes. The present edition follows the manuscript reading and notes all editorial interventions as well as the readings and emendations of Šujan and Hoffmann. Czech words were transliterated with a transcription and meaning suggested by Kateřina Voleková included in the notes.¹¹

Sigla

ms. Praha, Národní knihovna České republiky, III E 27 (the only surviving manuscript of the text)

H the readings by František Hoffmann (1996)

Š the edition by František Šujan (1885)

⁸ This study was supported by the European Regional Development Fund-Project “Creativity and Adaptability as Conditions of the Success of Europe in an Interrelated World” (No. CZ.02.1.01/0.0/0.0/16 _019/0000734) as well as by Progres Q07 (Centre for the Study of the Middle Ages), both carried out at the Faculty of Arts, Charles University.

⁹ Cf. Truhlář (1906: p. 199, č. 502) and Dragoun & Ebersonová & Doležalová (2021: pp. 344–346). The manuscript was digitized and is freely accessible through the database www.manuscriptorium.com [accessed 23.03. 2021].

¹⁰ Cf. Lehmann (1963: pp. 240–246); Bayless (1996: pp. 292–300) – Bayless edits the text but does not mention this manuscript (as well as a number of other extant copies).

¹¹ Kateřina Voleková based her transcription on the index card catalogue of the Old Czech Dictionary, stored in the Department of Language Development of the Czech Language Institute of the Czech Academy of Sciences, on Svoboda (1964) and Vokabulář webový (2006–2020).

[fol. 61r]

Passio raptorum de Slapanicz secundum Barthoss, tortorem Brunensem

*In illo tempore*¹² egressus Kyczol¹³ de finibus Polonie, venit¹⁴ in Slapanicz, ubi erat ecclesia, in quam manu armata introivit¹⁵ ipse et sui complices scelerati cum illo. Cumque suggestente dyabolo sacramentis¹⁶ corporis Domini nostri Jhesu Christi, ministris ecclesie et nonnullis sanctorum reliquiis, que ubi fuerant, electis et ecclesiam ipsam ausu sacrilego incastellatam¹⁷ occupassent, in campum tandem publice rapine ausu¹⁸ nephando progressi ceperunt infinita maleficia per incendia, rapinas et spolia in populum terre committere ita, ut homines plurimi exulare, alii tyrannidem eorum ferre non valentes, de domiciliis propriis fugere agrosque incultos deserere cogerentur. Nec hiis contenti maleficiis sed, ut in profundum ultime desperationis laberentur,¹⁹ dampnabilius in presbiteros, clericos, moniales, monachos, manus nocuas atroci sevicia miserunt, quosdam ex ipsis, ut pecunias extraherent, tormentis affecerunt variis, alios nudatos vestibus et ad vincula coniectos in intensissimo frigore sedere fecerunt, alios vero ferro constrictos in carceraribus²⁰ angustiis²¹ miserabiliter tenuerunt pluraque facta nephanda patrarunt, que scribere sigillatim et pudor vetat et audire pia mens horrescit.

Videntes igitur seniores populi et consules alme²² civitatis Brunensis huiusmodi maleficia et rabiem truculentam semper in dies, congregati sunt in pretorium et inito consilio ad invicem dixerunt: “Quid facimus, quia hec crudelis malefactorum²³ congregacio non modo nos et terre populum per rapinam et incursum hostilem destruit, verum eciam postposito timore in ministros dei vivi eius nomen blasphemans suam exercere tyrannidem ausu sacrilego non pavescit? Si dimittimus eam, sic omnes nos scandalum paciemur.”

Unus autem ex eis, Dywak²⁴ de Podscale nomine, cum esset quasi pontifex anni illius, prophetavit dicens: “*Expedit vobis,*²⁵ ut omnes malefici et raptiores pariter moriantur.”²⁶

12 Mt 11:25 and 12:1

13 Kyczol] Kyezolt Š

14 egressus... venit] cf. Mc 7:31

15 introivit] intravit Š

16 sacramentis] sacramento Š; sacramentum H

17 incastellatam] in castellatam Š; a rare word with a clear meaning “surrounded by walls”; the church of Šlapanice, originally a Romanesque structure from the 12th or the 13th century, was rebuilt in early Gothic style at the turn of the 14th century and indeed fortified later in the Middle Ages; neither the walls nor the bastions have survived.

18 ausu] causa Š

19 laberentur] labentur Š

20 carceraribus] i.e. carceralibus (carceralis means “ad carcerem pertinens”)

21 angustiis] angustis Š

22 alme] om. Š

23 malefactorum] maleficiorum Š

24 Dywak] Dywak add. in marg. ms.; translsc.: Divák

25 vobis] nobis Š

26 Unus ... moriantur] cf. Io 11:49–50

Ab illo ergo die cogitaverunt interficere²⁷ eos dicentes: “Ne forte raptore*s* contractis viribus *veniant*²⁸ et tollant locum nostrum universaque bona nostra in suos vertant usus. Scriptum est enim: ‘percuciamus eos et dispergetur eorum congregacio nobis infesta, que de die in diem manus feroce*s* mittens, opus pessimum operatur in nobis’. Hanc enim civitati nostre proximam semper habemus nobiscum, predam vero, quam rapiunt, raro vel nunquam redditam habemus. Huc usque iniuriis latrocibus²⁹ affecti prestolabamur sub silencio pacem, que nec venit; iam necesse est, ut talibus scandalis occur[fol 61v]rentes ipsorum effrenatam³⁰ audaciam³¹ nostra conteramus potencia et statim armis correptis ad eorum exterminium procedamus.”

Respondens³² autem Pessko³³ yppatus³⁴ dixit: “Rei sunt mortis!³⁵ Ego enim, et si opertuerit me mori cum illis, ad perdendum eos armis instructus et cuspide letus properabo.” *Similiter et alii dicebant.*³⁶

*Factum est autem,*³⁷ cum iam sero esset die illa,³⁸ ecce nobilis vir Herhardus de Cunstat³⁹ venit in Brunnam, *et cum eo turba multa,*⁴⁰ missi a principe serenissimo Marchione Jodoco,⁴¹ qui salutari proposito civium rite pensato, eoque plurimum laudato, opem mox et operam civibus ipsis ad ea, que facienda decreverant,⁴² dare fideliter pollicetur. *Et factum est ita.*⁴³ Cives autem predicti, quibus tantus vir opem prebebat et animum, ante sex dies

27 Ab illo ... interficere] cf. Io 11:53

28 Ne forte... veniant] Mt 27:64

29 iniuriis latrocibus] inimicis latronibus Š; latrocibus is certainly derived from latro (thief), perhaps influenced by the variant latrocinator witnessed in Bohemia

30 effrenatam] affrenatam Š

31 Effrenatam audaciam] cf. Cicero, Orationes (In Cat.), 1, 1, 1

32 Respondens] Priidem Š

33 Pessko] Pessko add. in marg. ms.; Latinized Czech name Pešek; Hoffmann identifies him with Pešek Tendler, member of Brno town council (Hoffmann 1996: 155)

34 yppatus] i.e. hypatos, i. m. = praefectus, magister civium; this text seems to be the only evidence of this word in sources of Bohemian origin

35 Rei ... mortis] cf. Mt 26:66

36 Et si... dicebant] cf. Mt 26:35

37 Factum est autem] e.g. Lc 1:8

38 Cum ... illa] cf. Io 10:19

39 Erhardus de Cunstat] Erhardus de Cunstat add. in marg. ms.; i.e. Erhart Puška of Kunštát (d. 1415, cf. Hoffmann 1996: p. 155), or possibly Erhart of Kunštát, the Elder (d. 1406), the camerarius of Brno who acquired large possessions thanks to his support of Jobst of Moravia

40 Et ... multa] Mt 26:47

41 Jodoco] i.e. Jobst of Moravia (Jošt Moravský, ca. 1353–1411, Margrave of Moravia from 1375, also King of the Romans from 1410)

42 decreverat] devoraverant Š

43 Et ... ita] Gn 1:7, 9, 11, 15, 30

pasce⁴⁴ collegerunt multitudinem gencium armatorum cum fustibus, lanceis, cuspidibus, clipeis,⁴⁵ pixidibus,⁴⁶ iaculis et sagittis.

Qui dum iter suum versus Slapanicz gressu celeri agerent, videntes eos raptore ceperunt contristari⁴⁷ et mesti esse.⁴⁸ Quidam autem ex eis,⁴⁹ Wlach⁵⁰ nomine, capitaneus illorum, cum vidisset animos suorum consternatos, hac oracione⁵¹ confirmabat eos, dicens: “Obsecro,⁵² viri strenui,⁵³ generis nobilitate conspicui et in rebus militaribus experti, ut adventus civium non vos terreat,⁵⁴ nec animos vestros degener metus frangat, ut ponere in cordibus vestris⁵⁵ hanc opinionem velitis, quod eorum iners turba voluptatibus magis civilibus quam armis inbuta posset nos tam facile suis viribus expungnare. Paterne igitur glorie memores animi deiecti consternatique vigorem resumite, muros confestim sagittis et iaculis armati ascendite, temeritatem civium simul et impetum⁵⁶ fortiter retundite et hodie pro animabus vestris pugnate,⁵⁷ alioquin scituri vos⁵⁸ et genus vestrum dedecus semipiternum merere. Si vel fuge turpis notati vicio hinc⁵⁹ abscesseritis vel saltim indefensi sicut femina in dedicionem hostium venietis, hec enim dies futuri certaminis fame vestre gloriose sic illustrabit, decus, qui procul dubio ipsius certaminis gloria veneranda in spem prosperitatis vestre effusa usque ad celi sidera, laudibus extolleter populorum.”⁶⁰

Respondens⁶¹ pro omnibus Caspar⁶² scriba dixit: “Ego ad hoc⁶³ natus sum et ad hoc fato urgente in hunc locum veni,⁶⁴ non ut pugnem, sed ut scribam litteras. Obsecro, mi domine, ut si fieri potest, transeat a nobis calix iste,⁶⁵ calix, inquam, presentis periculi et futuri patibili. Spiritus quidem promptus est, caro autem omnium⁶⁶ nostrum ac vires

44 ante ... pasce] Io 12:1

45 clipeis] clipeis Š

46 pixidibus] pexidibus Š

47 Ceperunt contristari] Mc 14:19

48 ceperunt ... esse] cf. Mt 26:37

49 quidam ... eis] Lc 11:15; eis] iis Š

50 Wlach] transcr. Vlach, i.e. Italian

51 oracione] oracio add. in marg. inf. ms.

52 obsecro] observo Š

53 strenui] strennui ms.

54 Non vos terreat] cf. Iob 9:34, 13:21, 33:7

55 Ponere ... vestris] cf. Deut 11:18, Lc 9:44

56 simul et impetum] similiter impetu Š

57 hodie ... pugnate] cf. 1 Macc 5:32

58 vos] nos ms.

59 hinc] huic Š

60 populorum] populo Š

61 respondens] priidem Š; prudens H

62 Caspar] transcr. Kašpar

63 hoc] hec Š

64 ego ... veni] cf. Io 18:37

65 obsecro ... iste] cf. Mt 26:39

66 omnium] omne Š

[fol. 62r] adeo fragiles et infirme,⁶⁷ ut tante civium multitudini resistere non possimus. Verumtamen⁶⁸ non sicut nos volumus sed sicut tu vis,⁶⁹ fiat voluntas tua.”⁷⁰

Premissa igitur oracione firmati raptore muros ecclesie cum saxis ingentis⁷¹ et sagittis certatim⁷² ascendunt et prospicientes⁷³ per menia viderunt maximam multitudinem gentium armatarum⁷⁴ stancium iam ante illos. Quibus et dixerunt: “Amici, quomodo huc⁷⁵ venistis non habentes vestem nuptialem?⁷⁶ Arma enim vestra iacula et sagitte, quibus instructi estis, non amicicie sed furoris vestri sunt indicia.” Nec dum illi verba sua finierant, et ecce cives Brunenses⁷⁷ ceto⁷⁸ expugnabili desiderio flammatantes sagittis primum et filiis pixidum loco responsi⁷⁹ in hostes directis⁸⁰ muros ipsos potenter invadunt, ignem porte civium⁸¹ adhibent et deinde scalis gradum prebentibus muros ecclesie apperta vi transeunt, ecclesiam capiunt, et in armis militares animos exhibentes⁸² in ipsos hostes iam pavore⁸³ gelidos consternatos se unanimesque⁸⁴ manus iniciunt, ab omni parte flagellis ferreis cedunt et in frontem et in latera et in tergum. Itaque subito civibus⁸⁵ impressionem facientibus hostium virtus inita⁸⁶ defecerat haut omnibus pene in captivitatem redactis reliqui,⁸⁷ quos⁸⁸ fuga non abstulit, in ignis et fumi thetra caligine suffocati desperatissimum spiritum perdidérunt. Ignis autem repente convalescens equos fere centum, ut fama tenet, arma multa victualia copiosa diversamque supellectilem fortē mittens aridis faucibus devoravit.

Cives autem Brunnenses, quibus primordia gloriosi certaminis⁸⁹ prospere successerant, leti supra⁹⁰ fidem facti de victoria continuato impetu alios raptore, qui sunt in

67 spiritus ... infirme] cf. Mt 26:41, Mc 14:38

68 Verumtamen] verum Š

69 Verumtamen ... vis] cf. Mt 26:39

70 fiat ... tua] Mt 26:42, Lc 22:42

71 ingentis] i.e. ingentibus (either a mere scribal mistake or mistakenly declined as the second declension)

72 certatim] statim Š

73 prospicientes] perspicientes Š

74 armatarum] armatorum Š

75 Quomodo huc] quo hunc Š

76 Amici ... nuptiale] cf. Mt 22:12

77 Brunenses] i.e. Brunnenses

78 ceto] cito em. Š

79 responsi] response Š

80 directis] directe Š

81 civium] cinium em. Š; civium H; meaning unclear

82 exhibentes] exhibenter Š

83 pavore] corr. ex pavodore ms., pavidore Š

84 unanimesque] i.e. inanimesque

85 civibus] in add. Š

86 inita] victa Š

87 reliqui] reliquos Š

88 virtus ... quos] in marg. ms.

89 gloriosi certaminis] cf. Pange lingua (Cantus Index no. 8367, Analecta hymnica, 1907, vol. 50, pp. 70–73)

90 supra] super Š

Meneis alias in⁹¹ Mienyn⁹² animis adhuc iram sanctam furoremque beatum spirantibus voluerunt invadere, sed, ut arbitror, *non erat eis datum*⁹³ deferre,⁹⁴ vas illic positum erat vino bono plenum,⁹⁵ quod cum armis gravati gustassent⁹⁶ bibentes ex eo fortiter et refocilato spiritu, qui in tantis laboribus pene defecerant, leti cum gaudio ad propria redierunt.

Vivite ergo felices in secula quos dextre dei presidium de hoste tam sevo triumphare constituit, et huius certaminis immortalis memoria *a solis ortu usque ad occasum*⁹⁷ famam vestri nominis sic faciat clarescere, ut genus vestrum lucem tante glorie a nobis⁹⁸ accipiens cunctis raptoribus et maleficis sit longe lateque terribile, formidabile et suspectum.

Capti sunt in hoc congressu quinquaginta sex raptores, qui dum ligatis manibus ducerentur in Brunnam viso patibulo, quod haut procul a civitate [fol. 62v] distat, exterriti sunt et facti sunt sicut *mortui*⁹⁹ ita, ut cogarentur totum¹⁰⁰ egerere, quod in unius anni spacio per ingluviem devorarant. Unde accidit, quod velum femoralium ipsorum scissum est in duas partes, a summo¹⁰¹ usque deorsum,¹⁰² ita ut preses preconum miraretur vehementer.¹⁰³ Postea tenebre facte sunt super universam terram,¹⁰⁴ et ex fragore armorum et tumultu¹⁰⁵ populi *terra mota est*¹⁰⁶ et multa corpora, que in lectulis dormierant ad spectaculum surrexerunt.¹⁰⁷ Et enim¹⁰⁸ hora noctis quasi quarta precones vero et ministri iudicis collegerunt eos hospicio et illudentes eis exeverunt¹⁰⁹ eos vestimentis eorum et induerunt eos vinculis ferreis¹¹⁰ et statim gallus cantavit.¹¹¹ Omnes autem, qui illic aderant, moventes capita sua blasphemabant dicentes: "Wach, iniqui raptores, en ecclesia vestra, quam castrum vocastis, igne consumpta est, que vix in tribus horis reedificabitur".¹¹²

91 alias in] alibi Š

92 Mienyn] Měnín, ca. 12 km south of Šlapanice.

93 Non ... datum] Mt 13:11

94 deferre] deserere Š

95 Vas ... plenum] Jo 19:29

96 gustassent] gustasent ms.

97 a solis ... occasum] Ps 49:1, Ps 112:3

98 nobis] vobis Š

99 Exterriti ... mortui] Mt 28:4

100 totum] totam Š

101 summo] fumo Š

102 vellum ... deorsum] cf. Mt 27:51, Mc 15:68, Lc 23:45

103 Ita ... vehementer] Mt 27:14

104 Tenebre ... terram] Mt 27:45, cf. Mc 15:33, cf. Lc 23:44

105 tumultu] tumultum Š

106 Terra mota est] Mt 27:51

107 Et multa ... surrexerunt] cf. Mt 27:52

108 enim] cum Š

109 exeverunt] eis add. del. ms., exuerunt Š

110 Illudentes ... ferreis] cf. Mt 27:31

111 Et statim ... cantavit] Io 18:27

112 moventes ... reedificabitur] cf. Mt 27:39–40, Mc 15:29

manete ergo hic, quoniam hec est domus, *quam vobis in hereditatem*¹¹³ elegistis. Cras enim illucescente¹¹⁴ die micantem tortoris gladium super vos videbitis et reddentem unicuique vestrum iuxta opera sua."¹¹⁵

Et illi rogaverunt eos dicentes: "Pacienciam habete in nobis et omnia reddemus ablatata." Illi autem dixerunt: "Et quando hec erunt?" Responderunt eis: "Post centum annos vel paulo plus." Illi autem indignantes dixerunt: "O iniqui, quo usque in obstinata malicia permanetis? Videre enim nunc volumus Kyczolt,¹¹⁶ Sokol,¹¹⁷ Suchyczrt,¹¹⁸ Brzyesyna,¹¹⁹ Kuorka,¹²⁰ Sul,¹²¹ Adam, Bycz,¹²² Odrole, Suchodol, Nemoy,¹²³ Wydlak,¹²⁴ Komar,¹²⁵ Uhlyk,¹²⁶ Otka,¹²⁷ Lopata,¹²⁸ Stiulik,¹²⁹ Chalupnik,¹³⁰ Wawak,¹³¹ Voydrzyduch,¹³² Metikal,¹³³ Drwosczepe,¹³⁴ Sohay,¹³⁵ Howencze,¹³⁶ Koczwara,¹³⁷ Hwydon,¹³⁸ Netozzyerz,¹³⁹ Ssmrz,¹⁴⁰

113 Quam ... hereditatem] Lev 20:24

114 illucescente] illuscente ms.

115 Reddentem ... sua] cf. Rev 2:23, Rev 22:12, Ps 61:13, Mt 16:27

116 Kyczolt] Kyezolt Š, i.e. the leader of the robbers mentioned at the beginning of the text as Kyczol (we do not transcribe because we suppose it is a Polish name)

117 Sokol] i.e. "falcon," perhaps Jan Sokol of Lamberk (Hoffmann 1996: 158).

118 Suchyczrt] transcr. Suchý črt, i.e. "dry devil," perhaps Hynek Suchý Čert of Kunštát, d. 1408 (Hoffmann 1996: 158)

119 Brzyesyna] Bryezyna Š, Brzezyna H, transcr. Bržezina, i.e. "birch leaf"

120 Kuorka] transcr. Kórka, i.e. "bread crust"

121 Sul] transcr. Zúl, Hoffmann identifies him with Jan Zúl of Ostředek (d. 1404) (Hoffmann 1996: 158–159)

122 Bycz] Byč Š, transcr. Bič, i.e. "whip"

123 Nemoy] transcr. Nemoi

124 Wydlak] transcr. Vidlák, i.e. "who works with pitchfork"

125 Komar] transcr. Komár, i.e. "gnat"

126 Uhlyk] transcr. Uhlík, i.e. "piece of coal"

127 Otka] i.e. "instrument used in ploughing for splitting clods and removing dirt from the ploughshare"

128 Lopata] i.e. "shovel"

129 Stiulik] transcr. Stůlák, i.e. "water lily" (?)

130 Chalupnik] transcr. Chalupník, i.e. "cottage"

131 Wawak] transcr. Vavák, i.e. "penis"

132 Voydrzyduch] Wydrzyduch HŠ, transcr. Vydržiduch, i.e. "who blackmails or exploits someone"

133 Metikal] Metkal Š, transcr. Mětikal, i.e. "who grubs in mud"

134 Drwosczepe] transcr. Drvoščep, i.e. "sawyer"

135 Sohay] transcr. Šohaj, i.e. "young man"

136 Howencze] transcr. Hovence, i.e. "little shit"

137 Koczwara] transcr. Kocvara or Kočvara, documented name

138 Hwydon] Hwydon Š, transcr. Hvědon; it might be a mistake instead of Hvízdon, which is a documented name

139 Netozzyerz] transcr. Netožier; this name is not documented

140 Ssmrz] transcr. Smrž, i.e. "mushroom" (specific type)

Pliskota,¹⁴¹ Uzzwal,¹⁴² Hrzebik,¹⁴³ Duben,¹⁴⁴ Buben,¹⁴⁵ Ssyndel,¹⁴⁶ Homole,¹⁴⁷ Rokoss,¹⁴⁸ Gumpolt, Amipolt, Quampl,¹⁴⁹ Lampl, Bochowecz,¹⁵⁰ Rochowecz,¹⁵¹ Squarkarz,¹⁵² Gygar, Markar, Passek,¹⁵³ Klal,¹⁵⁴ Kolda,¹⁵⁵ Oprzal,¹⁵⁶ Rzaksa,¹⁵⁷ Doxa,¹⁵⁸ Kobila,¹⁵⁹ Sowa,¹⁶⁰ Hassek,¹⁶¹ Wanya,¹⁶² Przibik,¹⁶³ Scoda,¹⁶⁴ Sapak,¹⁶⁵ Kapak,¹⁶⁶ Roczenermel,¹⁶⁷ Flug, Engenl,¹⁶⁸ Mudowlak¹⁶⁹ et Enndelweyn venientes liberent vos.”¹⁷⁰

Hoc autem totum factum est ut impleretur Scriptura¹⁷¹ dicens: “videbunt in quem transfixerunt.”¹⁷² Hic¹⁷³ autem, qui scripsit, premissa non vidit, sed manens in Brunna¹⁷⁴ audivit

141 Pliskota] transl. Plískota, i.e. “sleet”

142 Uzzwal] Vzzwal Š, transl. Užval or Uzval

143 Hrzebik] transl. Hřebík, i.e. “nail”

144 Duben] i.e. “April”

145 Buben] i.e. “drum”

146 Ssyndel] transl. Šindel, i.e. “shingle”

147 Homole] Homola HŠ, i.e. “cone”

148 Rokoss] transl. Rokos, i.e. “reed”

149 Quampl] Ouampl Š

150 Bochowecz] Bachowecz Š, transl. Bochovec

151 Rochowecz] transl. Rochovec

152 Squarkarz] Sczwarkarz Š, transl. Škvarkář, i.e. “producer of cracklings”

153 Passek] transl. Pašek or Pásek, i.e. “small belt”

154 Klal] transl. Klál, i.e. “he stabbed”

155 Kolda] Hoffmann proposes to identify him with Jan Kolda of Žampach (d. ca. 1406) (Hoffmann 1996: 159)

156 Oprzal] transl. Opršal

157 Rzaksa] Kaksa Š, transl. Řaksa, the name is not documented

158 Doxa] Dora Š, transl. Doksa

159 Kobila] transl. Kobyla, i.e. “mare”

160 Sowa] transl. Sova, i.e. “owl”

161 Hassek] transl. Hašek, Hoffmann suggests two different persons of this name, both witnessed in the Rosenberg books at the end of the 14th century (Hoffmann 1996: 159)

162 Wanya] Wanita Š, transl. Vanita

163 Przibik] transl. Přibík

164 Scoda] transl. Škoda, i.e. “loss” or “harm”

165 Sapak] transl. Sapák, i.e. “who tries to grab and shake” cf. Svoboda (1964: 133)

166 Kapak] Lapak HŠ, transl. Kapák, i.e. “who is on his way to hell”

167 Roczenermel] Koczcuermel Š

168 Engenl] Engel H, Eigenl Š, Gugenl T

169 Mudowlak] transl. Múdovlak, i.e. “who is carrying testicles” – in old Czech material it is not documented, but there is a modern word moudivláček (Eurasian penduline tit) for a bird whose nest looks like testicles

170 videre ... vos] cf. Mt 27:49, Mc 15:36

171 hoc ... scriptura] Io 19:36

172 videbunt ... transfixerunt] videbunt iniuritatem oculi mei etc. Š, Io 19:37, Zach 12:10

173 hic] hec Š

174 Brunna] Bruna Š

ex fama sicque et ex auditis *testimonium perhibuit, ut et vos, si vultis, credatis.*¹⁷⁵ Et facta autem hec sunt anno a nativitate Domini nostri millesimo CCCC° primo, feria secunda post diem palmarum.¹⁷⁶ [fol. 63r]

Altera autem die, que fuit tercia feria, congregati sunt seniores populi et consules civitatis ad pretorium¹⁷⁷ et communicato consilio volentes imminentibus periculis occurrere statuerunt, ut summitates murorum, tectorum et turris, que per ignis voraginem nondum in ruinam venerant mox diruerent et *usque ad fundamentum*¹⁷⁸ deponerent. Collecta igitur gencium armatorum multitudine dixerunt eis: “Ite in Slapanicz et adhibita custodia muros ipsos diruite sicut scitis,¹⁷⁹ ne per amplius raptores illic fugiant, et fiat novissimus error peior priore.”¹⁸⁰ Illi autem abeuntes fecerunt *sicut iniunctum*¹⁸¹ erat illis.¹⁸² Etc.¹⁸³

Biblical references

Gn 1:7	Mt 26:35	Mc 15:29
Gn 1:9	Mt 26:37	Mc 15:36
Gn 1:11	Mt 26:39	Mc 15:68
Gn 1:15	Mt 26:39	Mc 15:33
Gn 1:30	Mt 26:41	Lc 1:8
Lev 20:24	Mt 26:42	Lc 9:44
Deut 11:18	Mt 26:47	Lc 11:15
Zach 12:10	Mt 26:66	Lc 22:42
Iob 9:34	Mt 27:14	Lc 23:44
Iob 13:21	Mt 27:31	Lc 23:45
Iob 33:7	Mt 27:39–40	Io 10:19
Ps 49:1	Mt 27:45	Io 11:49–50
Ps 61:13	Mt 27:49	Io 11:53
Ps 112:3	Mt 27:51 (2x)	Io 12:1
Ps 136:7	Mt 27:52	Io 18:27
1 Macc 5:32	Mt 27:62	Io 18:37
Mt 11:25	Mt 27:64 (2x)	Io 19:29
Mt 12:1	Mt 27:65	Io 19:35
Mt 13:11	Mt 28:4	Io 19:36
Mt 16:27	Mc 7:31	Io 19:37
Mt 21:6	Mc 14:19	Rev 2:23
Mt 22:12	Mc 14:38	Rev 22:12

175 qui ... credatis] cf. Io 19:35

176 I.e. April 4, 1401.

177 altera ... pretorium] cf. Mt 27:62

178 usque ad fundamentum] Ps 136:7

179 ite ... scitis] cf. Mt 27:65

180 Et ... priore] cf. Mt 27:64

181 iniunctum] inunctum ſ

182 Illi ... illis] cf. Mt 21:6

183 Etc.] amen ſ

Bibliography

- Bayless, M. (1996). Parody in the Middle Ages: The Latin Tradition. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press.
- Doležalová, L. (2014). Passion and Passion: Intertextual Narratives in Late Medieval Bohemia between Typology, History, and Parody. In M. T. Kretschmer (Ed.), Biblical Typology as a Mode of Thinking in Medieval Historiography (pp. 245–265). Turnhout: Brepols.
- Doležalová, L. (in print). Parodic Passions between England and Bohemia. In J. Čermák, & P. Brown (Eds.), England and Bohemia in the Age of Chaucer. London: Boydell & Brewer.
- Dragoun, M., Ebersonová, A., & Doležalová, L. (2021). Středověké knihovny augustiniánů kanovníků v Třeboni a Borovanech, I: Rukopisy a inkunábule (Medieval libraries of Augustinian Canons in Třeboň and Borovany, I: Manuscripts and Incunables; pp. 344–346). Praha: Scriptorium.
- Havránek, B., Hrabák, J., & Daňhelka, J. (Eds.). (1963). Výbor z české literatury doby husitské (Anthology of Czech literature of the Hussite Period; Vol. 1, pp. 417–421, 467). Praha: Nakladatelství ČSAV.
- Hoffmann, F. (1994). Bojové družiny na Moravě a v Čechách před husitskou revolucí a za revoluce (Fight troops in Moravia and Bohemia before and during the Hussite revolution). Táborský archiv, 6, 47–144.
- Hoffmann, F. (1996). Pašije šlapanických loupežníků (Passion of the Robbers of Šlapanice). In L. Slezák, & R. Vlček (Eds.), K poctě Jaroslava Marka: Sborník prací k 70. narozeninám prof. dr. Jaroslava Marka (pp. 149–168). Praha: Akademie věd České republiky.
- Kotecki, R. (2012). The Desecration of Holy Places According to Witnesses' Testimonies in the Polish-Teutonic Order Trials of the 14th Century. In W. Sieradzan (Ed.), Arguments and Counter-Arguments. The Political Thought of the 14th–15th Centuries during the Polish-Teutonic Order Trials and Disputes (pp. 69–110). Toruń: Wydawnictwo Naukowe Uniwersytetu Mikołaja Kopernika.
- Lehmann, P. (1963). Die Parodie im Mittelalter (2nd ed.). Stuttgart: Anton Hiersmann.
- Newman, B. (2012). The Passion of the Jews of Prague: The Pogrom of 1389 and the Lessons of Medieval Parody. Church History, 81, 1–26.
- Raynaud, C. (2007). L'incendie des églises: un événement? In C. Carozzi, & H. Taviani-Crozzì (Eds.), Faire l'événement au Moyen Âge. Actes du séminaire de l'équipe de recherche Sociétés, ideologies et croyances au Moyen Âge (pp. 175–189). Aix-en-Provence: Presses universitaires de Provence.
- Steinová, E. (2010). Passio Iudeorum Pragensium: Kritická edícia Pašijí pražských židov (Passio Iudeorum Pragensium: Critical edition of the Passion of the Jews of Prague). Brno: Masarykova univerzita (unpublished M.A. thesis).
- Steinová, E. (2012). Jews and Christ Interchanged: Discursive Strategies in the Passio Iudeorum Pragensium. Graecolatina Brunensis, 17, 93–106.
- Strickland, M. (1996). The plundering of churches: sacrilege or military expediency? In Idem, War and Chivalry: The Conduct and Perceptions of War in England and Normandy (pp. 78–97). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- Svoboda, J. (1964). Staročeská osobní jména a naše příjmení (Old Czech personal names and our surnames). Praha: Nakladatelství Československé akademie věd.
- Šujan, F. (1885). Pašije šlapanických loupežníků (Passion of the robbers of Šlapanice). Sborník historický, 3, 245–252, 301–303.

Truhlář, J. (1906). Catalogus codicum manu scriptorum Latinorum, qui in c. r. bibliotheca publica atque Universitatis Pragensis asservantur (Vol. 2). Praha: Česká Akademie věd a umění.

Vokabulář webový. Webové hnízdo pramenů k poznání historické češtiny (online) (Web Vocabulary). Web nest of sources for learning historical Czech). (2006–2020). Praha: Ústav pro jazyk český AV ČR, v. v. i., oddělení vývoje jazyka (verze dat 1.1.15; cit. 20.06.2020) [available from <https://vokabular.ujc.cas.cz>].

Doc. Lucie Doležalová, Ph.D. / lucie.dolezalova@ff.cuni.cz

Institute of Greek and Latin Studies

Charles University, Faculty of Arts

Náměstí Jana Palacha 1/2, 116 38 Praha, Czech Republic

This work can be used in accordance with the Creative Commons BY-SA 4.0 International license terms and conditions (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-sa/4.0/legalcode>). This does not apply to works or elements (such as image or photographs) that are used in the work under a contractual license or exception or limitation to relevant rights

